

Sumitomo Corporation, Sumitomo Mitsui Finance and Leasing Co., Ltd. (SMFL) and Gogoro Inc. to Explore First of its Kind Partnership to Accelerate Gogoro's Global Business Expansion

April 30, 2024

Sumitomo Corp, a leading integrated trading company and SMFL, one of the world's premier financial institutions are looking to support Gogoro's global business expansion while creating new business opportunities for Sumitomo Corporation and SMFL.

TAIPEI, April 29, 2024 /PRNewswire/ -- Gogoro Inc. (Nasdaq: GGR), a global technology leader in battery-swapping ecosystems that enable sustainable mobility solutions for cities, today announced the signing of a non-binding memorandum of understanding (the "MOU"), the first step in establishing a new partnership with Sumitomo Corporation and Sumitomo Mitsui Finance and Leasing Co., Ltd. ("SMFL") to accelerate Gogoro's global business expansion while providing Sumitomo and SMFL with new unique opportunities to expand their mobility business and second life battery use cases using Gogoro Smart Batteries and battery swapping.

"Gogoro's innovative business ecosystem is designed to create broader business partnerships and business models that were not previously possible. Today, Sumitomo and SMFL are looking to accelerate Gogoro's global business expansion while utilizing Gogoro Smart Batteries and battery swapping to drive expansion of their own mobility business and second life battery revenue," said Horace Luke, founder and CEO of Gogoro. "Together, Gogoro, Sumitomo and SMFL share a vision for accelerating the expansion of sustainable energy and transportation in the world's most densely populated cities."

Gogoro utilizes big data from its innovative smart batteries and battery swapping platform to transform energy and make it more sustainable and accessible. Gogoro tracks dozens of parameters like battery condition, population distribution, and environmental conditions in real-time that provide significant insights that are unique to Gogoro. With nearly a decade of real-world data and new inputs being analyzed with every passing moment, Gogoro battery swapping gets smarter.

Sumitomo is involved in a wide range of areas in the automotive industry in Japan and overseas, from vehicle engineering and manufacturing to sales, after-sales service, and energy management. In the mobility services field, Sumitomo is involved in auto leasing, auto financing, EV-related business, individual subscription business, and parking lot business.

The MOU signals Sumitomo and SMFL's interest to support Gogoro's global business expansion, by leveraging their global networks and knowledge gained from existing businesses.

SMFL's mid-term management plan strategy includes the realization of a circular economy, and it intends to promote the battery circular economy through the creation of a battery reuse and recycling business using Gogoro's smart batteries and plans to seek new unique business opportunities using Gogoro's smart batteries as a new asset class for mobile second-life sustainable energy usage.

"Gogoro's potential partnership with Sumitomo and SMFL, a global leader in financing and leasing, would establish a new asset class using Gogoro smart batteries to create new business opportunities for Sumitomo and SMFL to utilize Gogoro's batteries for expanding their mobility business as well as generating second life battery revenue," said Bruce Aiken, CFO of Gogoro. "Amongst the many new business opportunities, this partnership would enable a new asset-light expansion model for Gogoro that doesn't require a large upfront capital investment while increasing the financial efficiency of our new markets."
